The Replacement Map

● OPEN NOW ○ WORKSHOP COMING

Eight tools that replaced the expensive parts of my own email design studio. Each one took a job I used to do by hand, and turned it into a rule a machine now runs every time.

Read the line top to bottom. Every station assumes the one above it exists. That is why the Auto Sorter is station 01: nothing below it works until your library can be found in 4 seconds.

STATION 01 / 08

The Auto Sorter

~~THE INTERN~~

Every email filed by brand, flow, category, language and year, on one canvas. First real run: 832 templates in one pass. Gave back a week every time the library grew.

STATION 02 / 08

The Presenter

~~FRIDAY'S DECK~~

One section per email, the brief beside it, the why under it. The client review deck builds itself from the week.

STATION 03 / 08

The Shuffler

~~THE FIRST DRAFT~~

Only rows the client already approved. Reorder, resize, swap copy and photos. No new elements.

STATION 04 / 08

The Gatekeeper

~~THE SECOND LOOK~~

Every layer checked before export. One real file: 209 emails, 173 clean, 36 with the same mistake.

STATION 05 / 08

Brand X Ray

~~THE BRAND AUDIT~~

Past sends become the library: hero signatures, module families, what was used when.

WORKSHOP 05 · COMING

STATION 06 / 08

The Capacity Manual

~~ONBOARDING~~

The rules your senior carries in their head, written down, so a new hire ships on day one.

WORKSHOP 06 · COMING

STATION 07 / 08

Studio Of One

~~THE ORG CHART~~

Agents plan the week, build the emails and review them. One human decides.

WORKSHOP 07 · COMING

STATION 08 / 08

The Content Engine

~~THE CONTENT TEAM~~

One idea in. Email, X, LinkedIn, carousel and video out, in your own voice.

BEFORE YOU BUILD ANYTHING · 3 QUESTIONS, NOBODY WATCHING

Find your first station.

1. What do you do every week that you'd never put on a job post?
2. What would you be embarrassed to pay someone $40 an hour to do?
3. What do you open Figma for, then close without designing a thing?

Whatever shows up in all three is your intern. For most studios, it's station 01.
